Welcome

Professor Njabulo S Ndebele
Chairman Nelson Mandela Foundation

to the Nelson Mandela Annual Lecture Series

The Nelson Mandela Foundation is pleased to welcome you to the 20th Nelson Mandela Annual Lecture, brought to you in partnership with the Province of KwaZulu-Natal and Old Mutual. This year's Lecture is to be delivered by Her Excellency, the Prime Minister of Barbados, Mia Mottley and is hosted in eThekweni in solidarity with the people of KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape.

The Nelson Mandela Annual Lecture is a unique platform to drive debate on critical social issues. The Lecture encourages the public, both local and international, to engage in dialogue about difficult social issues and intractable problems which today face South Africans and fellow world citizens around the globe. The theme of this year's Lecture focuses on the climate crisis and its multidimensional consequences, especially for so-called "developing countries" such as Barbados and South Africa.

In April 2022, heavy rains and catastrophic floods wreaked havoc on South Africa's east coast, killing more than 400 people and destroying thousands of homes and critical infrastructure in parts of the provinces of KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape. According to World Weather Attribution, the amount of rainfall experienced was 4% to 8% more intense than previously experienced. In the context of massive flooding in other parts of the world, there is little doubt that climate change is driving these catastrophes towards unprecedented levels.

It is now common cause that the climate crisis is real and that every country, and every sector of society, needs to play its part and contribute to efforts to mitigate the damage to our planet's ability to sustain human life. With this understanding, the Nelson Mandela Foundation has made the climate crisis a cross-cutting focus area of our work. Consequently, during this year's Mandela Day campaign activations, we launched our commitment to plant 1 million trees across South Africa between July 2022 and July 2023. Alongside this work, we are committed to capacitating sustainable community food gardens as well as home-based food gardens across all 9 provinces of South Africa.

Prime Minister Mottley has advocated for strategies to address the climate crisis, particularly in countries in the Global South where island nations are the most susceptible. She was recently crowned a Champion of the Earth by the United Nations Environmental Programme for her extraordinary work in raising the alarm on the harm climate change is visiting on "developing countries". Having followed her work for some time now, the urgency of her message became even more significant to us in the wake of the devastating floods in KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape. The Foundation's relief efforts demonstrated to us that our communities need urgent and sustainable solutions to deal with the climate crisis.

We are grateful to the KwaZulu-Natal Provincial Government for hosting the 20th Nelson Mandela Annual Lecture in eThekweni, making this Lecture the first one to be held in KwaZulu-Natal. We feel confident that today's Lecture will be a generative and fruitful one.

Thank you for joining us

THE TWENTIETH

NELSON MANDELA

Annual Lecture

DELIVERED BY THE PRIME MINISTER
OF BARBADOS, THE HONOURABLE
MIA AMOR MOTTLEY

The Honourable Mia Mottley is the Eighth Prime Minister of Barbados. She became the first woman to occupy the high office in 2018, after she led the Barbados Labour Party to an emphatic victory, winning all 30 seats in the House of Assembly by the largest margin ever seen in the electoral history of Barbados.

An Attorney-at-Law and Queen's Counsel, Prime Minister Mottley has been active in the political life of Barbados for almost three decades. First elected in 1994 she is presently serving her sixth term as Member of Parliament for the constituency of St. Michael North East.

Between 1994 and 2008 Miss Mottley served in the Cabinet of three successive Administrations, first as Minister of Education and Culture; then as Attorney-General and Minister of Home Affairs; and then as Minister of Economic Affairs. In 2003 she was appointed Deputy Prime Minister.

Prime Minister Mottley currently also holds the portfolios of Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Investment.

Since becoming Prime Minister, Miss Mottley has served as the Chair of the Conference of Heads of Government of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) between January 1st and June 30th, 2020. Notwithstanding that, Miss Mottley, as Prime Minister of Barbados, serves as the Lead Head of Government within CARICOM, bearing responsibility for the CARICOM Single Market and Economy (CSME).

Prime Minister Mottley has also served as Co-Chair of the Development Committee of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (November 2020 to October 2021).

Highlights

from the previous nineteen Lectures

Since its inception in 2003, the Nelson Mandela Annual Lecture has been a platform for renowned leaders to inspire action and ignite change. Here are highlights from the previous nineteen lectures.

William J. Clinton

Former President of the United States of America

THE WORLD IS LOOKING TO YOU - 2003

“Ever since human beings first rose up on this earth on the African Savannah over a hundred thousand years ago, we have constantly struggled each in our own little way with fear and hatred and hurt, with selfishness and short-sightedness, we constantly struggled to get beyond the narrow confines of our own experience to the larger truth of our common humanity. All of history in a way is the story of that struggle.”

Archbishop Emeritus Desmond Mpilo Tutu

Nobel Peace Laureate

LOOK TO THE ROCK FROM WHICH YOU WERE HEWN - 2004

“I have been saying that we South Africans tend to sell ourselves short. We seem to be embarrassed with our successes. We have grown quickly blasé, taking for granted some quite remarkable achievements and not giving ourselves enough credit. The result is that we have tended to be despondent, to seem to say behind every ray of sunshine there must be an invisible cloud – just you wait long enough and it will soon appear.”

Wangari Maathai

Nobel Peace Laureate

RISE UP AND WALK! - 2005

“Perhaps it is due to lack of information and ignorance, or perhaps it is due to poverty, but we need people who love Africa so much that they want to protect her from destructive processes. Some that are threatening the entire continent include desertification due to deforestation, encroachment into forests for subsistence farming, overgrazing and loss of biodiversity and soil. Of particular importance for Africa and the world is the protection of the Congo Basin Forest Ecosystem.”

Thabo Mbeki

Former President of the Republic of South Africa

RECONSTRUCTING OUR SOUL - 2006

“I am arguing that, whatever the benefit to any individual member of our nation, including all those present in this hall, we nevertheless share a fundamental objective to defeat the tendency in our society towards the deification of personal wealth as the distinguishing feature of the new citizen of the new South Africa.”

Kofi Annan

Former UN Secretary-General

A CRITICAL LOOK AT AFRICA - 2007

“We live in an era of interdependence. That is true everywhere in the world; but in some ways it is more obvious in Africa than anywhere else. We Africans know, perhaps more than most, that problems like water shortages and disease, like environmental degradation and political unrest, cannot be neatly contained within national borders. If some of us are poor, we are all the poorer; if some countries are unstable, we are all less secure.”

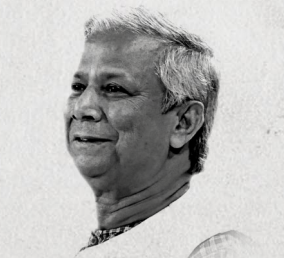

Ellen Johnson Sirleaf

Former President of Liberia

BEHOLD THE NEW AFRICA - 2008

“This New Africa is being built, every day, by the African people – people who reach out across boundaries – real and imagined. They are not waiting for the Renaissance to be determined by states and by governments alone, for they know that they are a part of an interconnected world.”

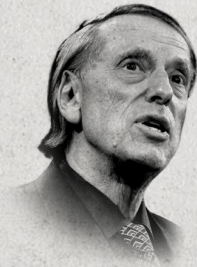

Muhammad Yunus

Nobel Peace Laureate

WE CAN CREATE A WORLD OF OUR CHOICE - 2009

“The human journey began in Africa. On behalf of Africa, let’s make South Africa the first country where poverty will not exist, nobody will be a poor person. Let’s do it fast – let’s do it in the next 20 years. You are laughing because it seems impossible. Since it sounds so impossible this has all the ingredients of getting done. Let us pledge that we’ll do it. Let’s plan what we’ll do after 20 years when poverty is over. For one thing, we’ll advertise in the media that if anybody can find one poor person anywhere in South Africa, we’ll give him a million-dollar award. We’ll be confident that nobody will be able to claim that award – because nobody will succeed in finding a poor person in South Africa.”

Ariel Dorfman

Author and Human Rights Activist

WHOSE MEMORY? WHOSE JUSTICE? A MEDITATION ON HOW AND WHEN AND IF TO RECONCILE - 2010

“Memory matters. One of the primary reasons behind the extraordinary crisis humanity finds itself in is due to the exclusion of billions of human beings and what they remember, men and women who are not even a faraway flicker on the nightly news, on the screen of reality. One of the ways out of our predicament is to multiply the areas of participation, create veritable oceans of participation. To offer room and respect to those memories and stories is not a merely charitable, paternalistic initiative, but an act of supreme self-preservation. A nation that does not take into account the multitude of suppressed memories of the majority of its people will always be weak, basing its survival on the exclusion of dissent and otherness.”

Ismail Serageldin

Founding Director of the Bibliotheca Alexandria

THE MAKING OF SOCIAL JUSTICE: PLURALISM, COHESION AND SOCIAL PARTICIPATION - 2011

“Now, this surge for freedom will face setbacks to be sure. But ultimately, it must triumph. And it is more than a demand for freedom of expression. It is also a demand for the making of social justice. For our youth are revolting against a society where there is or was corruption in high offices, aimlessness amongst youth, anxiety among the elderly, and a profound sense of loss among those who look beyond material success for the inner meaning of their lives. A new society has to be built on the basis of social justice.”

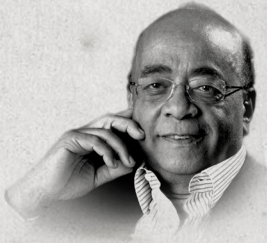

Mary Robinson

Former President of Ireland

FREEDOM, TRUTH, DEMOCRACY: CITIZENSHIP AND COMMON PURPOSE - 2012

“When we think of citizenship, we think of a definition based on nationality of a particular country. But my view is that in the 21st century, we need a new concept of citizenship that embraces all of those people who find themselves in the country – nationals and migrants alike. This is particularly relevant to countries like South Africa, a “go to” country with a strong economy that attracts and will continue to attract a large migrant population.”

Mo Ibrahim

Philanthropist and Businessperson

BUILDING SOCIAL COHESION - 2013

“Now finally I would really like to say that South Africa matters. Of course, it matters to you as South Africans, it also matters to us as Africans. We look up to you. You are the most advanced – economically, industrially – country in Africa. We look in admiration to your wonderful struggle to freedom. We look at your founders, founding fathers, the great Mandela, he is our hero. He is an African icon. Not only for you, he is our hero, too. So we expect a lot from you. And we will not refrain from being critical when we see you wavering and misbehaving because you matter for us. You are the locomotive. You are supposed to pull this region forward, economically, socially and culturally. We expect more from you.”

Michelle Bachelet

Former President of Chile

BUILDING SOCIAL COHESION THROUGH ACTIVE CITIZENSHIP - 2014

“In summary, basic standards of legality are no longer enough. I would say, representative democracy is no longer enough for citizens - not with the civility of our institutions, not with regard for a set of rights that have already been achieved. Today on top of demands for democracy, an equal distribution of opportunities, goods and services, the demand for participation is essential.”

Thomas Piketty

Economist

INCOME, WEALTH AND PERSISTENT INEQUALITY - 2015

“What Africa needs is not foreign aid. Africa is not asking for help. What Africa needs is an international legal system that allows African countries to make multinational companies and wealthy citizens pay their fair tax. This is what Europe and North America should now offer.”

Bill Gates

Businessperson

LIVING TOGETHER - 2016

“It’s clear to everyone how big and complicated the challenges are. But it’s just as clear that people with bravery, energy, intellect, passion, and stamina can face big, complicated challenges and overcome them. There is so much more work to be done to create a future in which we can all live together. But there are also so many people who are eager to get to work.”

Amina J. Mohammed
United Nations Deputy Secretary-General

CENTERING GENDER: REDUCING INEQUALITY THROUGH INCLUSION
- 2017

“During the democratic transition, women’s representation in Parliament increased tenfold, from 2.7 percent to 27 percent. African women went in a few short years from the indignity of being a minor from the cradle to the grave, to holding some of the most powerful positions politically and economically. Yet sadly, the long walk to freedom for women and adolescent girls globally remains unfinished.”

Barack Obama
Former President of the United States of America

RENEWING THE MANDELA LEGACY AND PROMOTING ACTIVE
CITIZENSHIP IN A CHANGING WORLD - 2018

“Now, this surge for freedom will face setbacks to be sure. But ultimately, it must triumph. And it is more than a demand for freedom of expression. It is also a demand for the making of social justice. For our youth are revolting against a society where there is or was corruption in high offices, aimlessness amongst youth, anxiety among the elderly, and a profound sense of loss among those who look beyond material success for the inner meaning of their lives. A new society has to be built on the basis of social justice.”

Mogoeng Mogoeng
Former Chief Justice of South Africa

CONSTITUTIONALISM AS AN INSTRUMENT FOR TRANSFORMATION
- 2019

“When we think of citizenship, we think of a definition based on nationality of a particular country. But my view is that in the 21st century, we need a new concept of citizenship that embraces all of those people who find themselves in the country – nationals and migrants alike. This is particularly relevant to countries like South Africa, a “go to” country with a strong economy that attracts and will continue to attract a large migrant population.”

António Guterres
Secretary-General of the United Nations

TACKLING THE INEQUALITY PANDEMIC: A NEW SOCIAL CONTRACT FOR A NEW ERA - 2020

“In summary, basic standards of legality are no longer enough. I would say, representative democracy is no longer enough for citizens - not with the civility of our institutions, not with regard for a set of rights that have already been achieved. Today on top of demands for democracy, an equal distribution of opportunities, goods and services, the demand for participation is essential.”

Fatou Bensouda
Former Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court

THE RULE OF LAW, INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND ITS CONTRIBUTION TO SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT - 2021

“What Africa needs is not foreign aid. Africa is not asking for help. What Africa needs is an international legal system that allows African countries to make multinational companies and wealthy citizens pay their fair tax. This is what Europe and North America should now offer.”

The Nelson Mandela Foundation

The Nelson Mandela Foundation was established in 1999 when its founder, Mr Nelson Mandela, stepped down as the President of South Africa. It aims to help build a society that remembers its past, listens to all its voices and pursues social justice.

The Foundation delivers to the world an integrated and dynamic information resource on the life and times of Nelson Mandela and promotes the search for sustainable solutions to critical social problems through memory-based dialogue and tangible interventions to realise the legacy of Madiba.

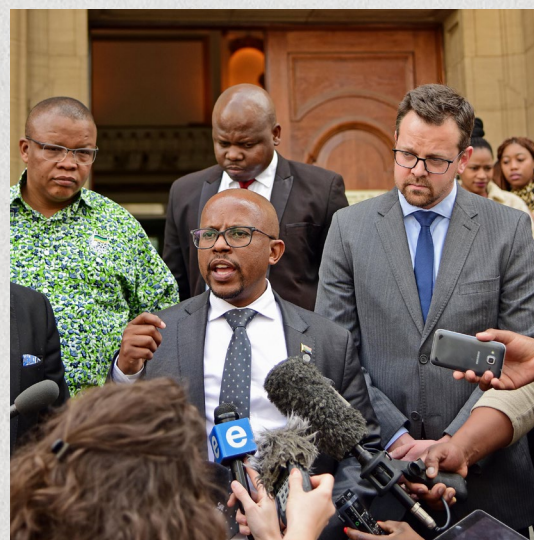

Constitutionalism

The overarching theme and organising principle for all we do is constitutionalism. The Nelson Mandela Foundation is committed to both broadening and deepening constitutionalism in South Africa, with the objective of ensuring that the Constitution becomes a lived reality for all. In this work, we see the rule of law as fundamental to democracy, human dignity and social bonding.

Dialogue and Advocacy

The Nelson Mandela Foundation works to ensure active engagement with the public on critical social issues. The Foundation does this by providing a dialogue dimension to all its work and undertaking strategic dialogue and advocacy interventions in support of finding sustainable solutions to societal problems.

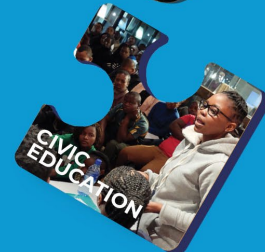

Our focus areas for the last three years have been on poverty and inequality, race and identity, and reckoning with oppressive pasts.

Land

Land reform has been a focus area for several years now for the Foundation. The South African government and other sector players have underscored the strategic role that publicly owned land parcels can play in realising urban land reform. In 2021, we commissioned a study of publicly owned golf courses in Johannesburg, hosted a dialogue titled “Making Cities a Home: Achieving urban land reform” with the Minister of Public Works and Infrastructure, Patricia de Lille, giving the keynote address. We also launched three papers on urban land reform which we had commissioned with the Development Action Group and the Socio-Economic Rights Institute of South Africa.

In the service of democracy, peace and development

The Hanns Seidel Foundation is a German political foundation mandated and funded by the German Parliament, the Bundestag, to strengthen constitutionalism, the rule of law and sustainable democratic structures.

In South Africa we have offices in Johannesburg and Cape Town. Together with our great local partner organizations, we promote for over 30 years the topics mentioned above.

Early Childhood Development

Our Early Childhood Development (ECD) programme translates our dialogue intervention into work that addresses systemic challenges in the ECD sector in collaboration with the state and civil society. We work to build skills and capacity in the ECD workforce. We believe that universal access to basic ECD services is a key lever to end intergenerational poverty and inequality in South Africa.

The Vangasali campaign is a partnership with the state, Impande SA and Data Innovators, and is now in its second phase. Its overarching objective is to ensure the identification, support and registration of all ECD centres in the country.

During Phase 1 of the campaign, over 45 000 ECD services were identified – most of whom were unregistered. With the first phase of the Vangasali campaign now complete, the second phase of the campaign is aimed at supporting ECD services to be registered. When ECD services are registered, they are better equipped to provide a safe environment, healthy nutrition and quality developmental support to the next generation and provide jobs in their communities.

Vangasali is a Xitsonga word meaning “No One Left Behind”, which is what this campaign is trying to do by finding every ECD service in South Africa and enabling the realisation of universal basic ECD service provision to all children in South Africa.

Race & Identity

The Atlantic Fellows for Racial Equity is a transnational, multi-racial programme - based at the Nelson Mandela Foundation in South Africa and Columbia University in the United States - that advances leadership, solidarity, ideation and action to address the systemic challenges of anti-Black racism and white supremacy.

We support accomplished leaders from diverse backgrounds to uncover and address the root causes of racial inequality and engage in strategic, long-term collaborative efforts for transformative social change.

Through leadership development, community building, design labs and narrative change, we support the personal development and capacity of these leaders and catalyse broader social change activity, based on a view that both are required to achieve racial equity.

Reckoning with the Past

The Nelson Mandela Foundation has in its custody an archive on the life and times as well as works and writings of its founder, Mr Mandela. The physical collections include handwritten papers, official records and unique artefacts from the personal archive of Nelson Mandela in addition to records from his post-presidential office after his retirement as President of South Africa in 1999. The core work of the Nelson Mandela Foundation's research and archive function is to generate an integrated and dynamic information resource on the life and times of Nelson Mandela and to undertake research and analysis required to support the Nelson Mandela Foundation's work.

The Foundation routinely fields several thousand enquiries a year about Mr Mandela, about archival resources, access to materials, and use of Mr Mandela's intellectual property. The Foundation constitutes a 'one-stop shop' for all such enquiries, whatever their origin. The Foundation will continue to do so without fear or favour.

Extensive measures have been undertaken to preserve the physical collections to international standards. Our purpose-built archival vault was created with customised temperature, humidity, light levels, and air quality control with individual collection materials already having undergone strict archival processes such as identification, cataloguing, deacidification, and digitisation.

ACoM

The Foundation also makes the archive of the life and times of Nelson available through the Archive at the Centre of Memory (ACoM), a digital portal to the digitised collections in the Foundations archives, as well as a cultural programme aimed at reckoning with the past.

The ACoM programme hosts dialogues and a podcast exploring the archive, colonialism and Apartheid, contemporary struggles for social justice and the future, as well as hosting exhibitions that interrogate historical narratives, such as the yet inexplicable 1988 assassination of Dulcie September who was the African National Congress's highest ranking representative in France and "Accused #2: Walter Sisulu", a virtual reality exhibition by Reality Check that dramatises Walter Sisulu's original testimony to the Rivonia Trial and many others.

Nelson Mandela International Day

Nelson Mandela International Day was launched in 2009 in recognition of Nelson Mandela's birthday on the 18th of July. The campaign is an opportunity for families, schools and organisations to roll up their sleeves and contribute to their communities by supporting local and sustainable social initiatives, in honour of the legacy of Nelson Mandela.

This year, the focus for Nelson Mandela International Day is food security and combating the climate crisis. With the theme "Do What You Can, With What You Have, Where You Are", we aim to plant 1 million trees across South Africa and establish 9 sustainable food gardens in each of the provinces of South Africa. With the support of our partners, the public and private sector, this will significantly contribute to combating climate change and food insecurity in South Africa.

Being a Trusted Voice

The Nelson Mandela Foundation is regarded as a trusted voice on critical social issues and on the life and times of Nelson Mandela.

Just over the past year, we received the 2021 Marianna Vardinoyannis Foundation Award, which was received in Greece by our Chief Executive, Sello Hatang; our Chief Operating Officer Limpho Monyamane won an award for the quality of her professional work; the documentary Murder in Paris, on which the Foundation collaborated, was a co-winner of the best documentary award at the Durban Film Festival; and our #ZARights merchandise collection won a Loerie Bronze design award.

Climate action

In 2020, Hulamin became the first semi-fabricator of aluminium to commit to science-based greenhouse gas (GHG) targets in line with the Paris Agreement. In the same year, COVID-19 disrupted lives and economies in an unprecedented manner, and societies across the globe were grappling with an immediate need to protect lives and livelihoods, requiring a collective global response. Climate change is equal, and more urgent because of the increasing, planet-wide, and permanent impacts. Our region has already experienced extreme heat, cold, and floods that caused damage to roads, and shelters and disrupted education, lives, and livelihood.

Climate action is an enormous task and implementation requires revolutionary changes at the government, industry, and societal levels. At Hulamin, we have a unique opportunity to make production processes more sustainable by prioritizing circular approaches, resource efficiency, and low-carbon energy solutions. Now is the time for the industry to collaborate by investing in skills and capabilities, innovation, technology, and partnerships to build a just response to the climate crisis.

Join the Legacy Partners

Legacy Partners make an investment of R1-million to R9.9-million to assure the preservation of Madiba's legacy through his personal archives and his life and times through the Foundation's extensive dialogue, advocacy, content and education programmes to ensure Madiba's legacy will continue to empower societies to move towards freedom.

We are pleased to recognise Legacy Partners through Legacy Partner Certificates; access to Foundation activities and stakeholders; and recognition in internal and external communications, both locally and internationally.

Become a Legacy Champion

Legacy Champions ensure that Madiba's legacy continues beyond his passing.

Opportunities include:

- An investment of R10-million or more in The Nelson Mandela Foundation Sustainability Fund in honour of our late Founder, Nelson Mandela
- Becoming an Ambassador among iconic global Champions by inviting your network of friends and colleagues to join you as a Legacy Champion
- Joining a unique community of prominent figures that have already made this commitment. They include: former US President Bill Clinton, Mr Patrice Motsepe, Mr Tokyo Sexwale, Mr David Rockefeller and Ms Peggy Dulany. The Indian Government and Vodacom have also joined this illustrious group.

We are pleased to recognise Legacy Champions through an inscription on the Foundation's Wall of Honour in the Nelson Mandela Centre of Memory; Legacy Champion certificates; limited edition statues signed by Mr Mandela (while supplies last); and VIP access to the Foundation and its activities. These donors also receive privileged recognition in internal and external communications, both locally and internationally.
